MUST HEED LAWS OF WAR

Inhabitants of the Philippines Are Warned in a Proclamation by Gen. MacArthur.

MUST COMPLY STRICTLY WITH RULES.

Insurgent Leaders Notified That Certain Practices, If Continued, Will Make Them Fugitive Criminals—American Scouts Follow Up Many Mountain Trails.

Manila, Dec. 23.—Gen. MacArthur has issued a proclamation warning the inhabitants of the archipelago that hereafter strict compliance with the laws of war will be required of non-combatants as well as combatants. The proclamation sets forth the principal laws of war.

Warning to Leaders. It refers to recent proclamations issued by insurgent commanders threatening natives who are friendly to the American forces and also to the orders issued to their men to kidnap and assassinate residents of towns occupied by Americans. The insurgent leaders are notified that such practices, if continued, will put an end to the possibility of their resuming normal civil relations, and will make them fugitive criminals.

May Be Tried as Traitors. Residents of places occupied by Americans are notified that compliance with the demands of the enemy will create a presumption that such acts are voluntary and malicious. They are notified that pleas of intimidation will rarely be accepted, and that where secret committees are permitted to exist in behalf of the insurgents, even well disposed persons will be exposed to the danger of being tried as traitors.

Must Not Abuse Leniency. The proclamation says that its warnings and requirements are to apply with special force to Manila, the rendezvous of the emissaries of insurrection.

Newspapers are warned against publishing seditious and the proclamation declares that the rebels, who are not part of an organized force, are not entitled to the privileges of prisoners of war, adding that the fact that they have not hitherto been held responsible is "evidence of the solicitude of the United States to avoid the appearance of harshness."

Follow Mountain Trails. Manila, Dec. 21.—Every mountain trail in Gen. Young's district north of the Abra river and between the coast and Dolores has been followed up by the American scouts this month. A similar movement has taken place in the provinces of Union, Benguet, Lepanto and that part of South Ilocos which lies south of the Abra river. Fifteen insurgents have been killed and more than 100 captured. The villages are always abandoned before the arrival of the Americans, but many buildings that have been used as barracks have been destroyed.

A Lively Scrimmage. Washington, Dec. 21.—A cablegram from Admiral Remy gives an account of a sharp brush with Filipino insurgents at Limbon, in which 12 insurgents were killed, 12 rifles captured and a large amount of stores destroyed.

Insurgents Routed. Manila, Dec. 21.—Advices from southern Luzon say that a lieutenant and 60 men of the Ninth United States cavalry attacked a large body of insurgents near Guinobatan, province of Albay. After the battle 45 dead insurgents were counted, together with many wounded. The only American casualty was the wounding of a sergeant.

Made Governor. Manila, Dec. 24.—The Philippine commission has appointed H. Phelps Whitmarsh governor and Otto Scherer secretary of the province of Benguet. Mr. Whitmarsh has been here two years, principally engaged as a newspaper correspondent, and has resided latterly at Baguim, which will be the seat of government and is the central point of the region. Mr. Scherer is a German, who has lived 20 years in the Philippines.

Safe Blown Open. Mattoon, Ill., Dec. 24.—Dalton City, north of here, was the scene of a daring bank robbery early Saturday morning. The safe in the bank was blown open and over $5,000 taken. In the explosion $600 in bills were slightly burned. The thieves threw away, fearing they would aid in detection.

Died Suddenly. Washington, Dec. 22.—Mrs. William P. Frye, wife of the president pro tem of the senate, died suddenly at the Hamilton hotel. The body was taken to Lewiston, Me., the home of Senator Frye.

Children Cremated. San Jose, Cal., Dec. 24.—The residence of Conrad Ruff, a dairyman near this city, was destroyed by fire and his four young children perished in the flames.

Won't Be Sold. Fremont, O., Dec. 22.—It is stated authoritatively that Spiegel Grove, the home of the late Rutherford B. Hayes, will not have to be sold, as reported.

Strike Declared Off. Topeka, Kan., Dec. 22.—President Dolph, of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, has declared the strike of the operators on the Santa Fe off.

Lost His Sight. Unadilla, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Fred Norton, a youth living here, has lost the sight of both eyes as a result of excessive smoking of cigarettes.

ENDS IN A ROW.

Italian Christmas Festivities Culminate in a Fight in Which One Man Is Killed.

New York, Dec. 25.—An Italian dance at Mamaroneck, N. Y., which was started Sunday night as a Christmas celebration ended Monday morning in a murderous row, one man being killed outright, another so badly stabbed that he is expected to die and several others receiving bad wounds. The scene of the tragedy was the "Foot-and-a-half house." From what can be learned the row was started by Antonio Dori. Veto Naraglano was waiting around the dance hall with a young woman who had refused to dance with Dori. The latter followed them about the hall, ridiculing their dancing and making himself generally disagreeable to them. Naraglano replied to his taunts and Dori challenged him to a duel. The dance was stopped immediately, followed by all the revelers, and the musicians left their instruments on the floor. Naraglano drew a revolver, Dori a stiletto. The latter made a plunge at Naraglano and drove his stiletto deep into the man's breast. Naraglano fired twice. One shot tore open Dori's arm and the other struck Antonio Guseppi, one of the musicians, in the eye, the bullet penetrating the brain. This immediately precipitated a general fight. When the Italians had fought themselves tired Guseppi and Naraglano were helpless on the ground. Dominio Chippi and Guseppi Cortez were bleeding from many cuts. Guseppi, the musician, died Monday night and Naraglano is still unconscious. After the fight there was a general flight of Italians from the town, and as but little information can be obtained no arrests have been made yet.

STILL UNSOLVED.

Development in the Cudaby Case May Help to Unravel the Mystery.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 25.—Two important developments in the Cudaby kidnapping case were reported to the police Monday, and it is hinted by the father of the boy that other information which may lead to the discovery of the abductors is being kept from the public. The lantern used by the kidnappers to signal the father when he delivered the gold has been found, located beyond a doubt the exact spot where the ransom was paid. Near it were two bags, made from the legs of trousers. In a barn near Pacific Junction, Ill., 22 miles south, and just across the river, a pony answering the description of the one ridden by one of the abductors, was discovered, left there, apparently, by some agent of the fugitives. The saddle was in a neighboring barn, and a pair of trousers was in the shed in which the pony had been abandoned. However, although it is one week since Edward A. Cudaby, Jr., was kidnapped, no clew found by the police or detectives has led to the capture of any man against whom there is the slightest evidence to connect him with the crime. The reward of $25,000 offered by the wealthy packer, who paid a similar amount for the ransom of his son, has failed to tempt anyone to betray the abductors. Large sums already have been spent in hiring private detectives, and every possible effort has been put forth by the local police department to find the kidnappers, but so far to no effect.

THE CHORUS OF THE SEA.

I hear unnumbered voices in the chorus of the waves. Among them spirit echoes as from sailors' hidden graves. A multitude of murmurs that in differing degree Combine to make the matchless music chanted by the sea; O'er beach and land in measures grand these liquid songs are sung. As though each flashing jeweled drop had found a jeweled tongue. Here unto Nature's devotees with understanding ear Each murmur speaks its message sweet, harmoniously clear; Vise heads and hearts are tuned to catch the subtle soul of sound. When waves reveal in language large God's mysteries profound; They speak the secrets of the sea, concealed through ages past, And reach prophetic aims toward the future veiled and vast. What are the oratorios and symphonies of man Compared to those devised upon God's widest, wisest plan. Interpreting the thought of God enshrined in sweetest song. Which ranges from the light bird-note to thunder roll and storm. Waves roar and cheer in charging lines, laugh, clamor and rejoice, And every breaker silver-fringed hath here a silver voice. The lights and shadows come and fade like ghosts of long ago, And with them lights and shades of sound in rapture ebb and flow. Like voiced reflections of the tints and strangely glorious gleams, Until they mingle into one like music heard in dreams; While every note its message hath for souls attuned to hear of God. The whirling, or the faintest truth God whispers low and clear. Wouldst hear the beat of Nature's heart, then hear the throbbing sea, And learn the message sheathed in song God uttereth for thee. A thousand voices loud or low, each beautiful alone, Complete, sweeter when combined in matchless time and tone; A thousand hands along the sands play when God's baton wags, And in one hallelujah chorus thrill the world with praise. I. EDGAR JONES.

THE MAN WITH THE STRIPED SHIRT

"YOU seem unhappy this morning," remarked the silent partner to his associate after the stenographer had left the room in tears to receive the condolences of the temporarily discharged office boy. "And yet," he continued, "there is no yellow tinge to your skin, and your eyes are bright and your hand steady. No one would believe that you were suffering from an active fit of remorse and had determined to take it out on all the dependent humanity that crossed your bilious path, to look at you. Why don't you go across the way to the drug store and take something for it?"

"It's not that," said the disgruntled man, passing his hand wearily across his forehead. "It's my shirt."

"Then I have no sympathy to offer. A man of your ordinary intelligence ought to know enough to take a pen-knife and make a new buttonhole if the neckband is too large for your collar, and if it is simply a case of fray you can easily dampen it and take the starch out of it. There's no excuse for you coming up here and raising Ned over a trifle like that."

"If you had an instantaneous bleaching process to suggest you might help me," observed the other. "As it is I'm conscious that I've got on a thing with purple stripes and I'd be willing to exchange it for one of haircloth. It wouldn't have nearly the irritating effect on me. I wasn't born to the purple—I had it thrust upon me. The clerk said it was the latest thing this season and neat in its effect, and it didn't look so bad when he showed it to me. But I got under its influence five minutes after I had put it on, and half killed an innocent kitten that came and confidingly wiped its little pink nose on my trousers. That's the trouble with me—the inability to size up a garment before it has actually passed into my possession, and my cowardly and parsimonious aversion to throwing it away when it tortures me to look at it. It's bad enough with anything, but with shirts it is simply maddening. Shirts have always been the bane of my life."

"In what respect?" asked the silent partner.

"In every respect. I have to buy them ready-made because a man has to take off his coat and waistcoat and put them on again afterward to get measured, and my doctor tells me to avoid all unnecessary exertion on account of my heart, so to a certain extent I have to take chances on the fit. That's a good suggestion of yours about the button-holes, however. Well, then, there's the pattern and color. It isn't once in three times that I get anything that on sober second thought satisfies me. Then, as I say, I haven't the sand to throw anything away. I say to myself that I'll save it for an emergency, and I find that the emergency happens about twice a week. If I get on a shirt that suits me I'm as happy as a king and my heart sings within me, but the wrong color throws me off just as you see me this morning. Doesn't it ever affect you that way?"

"Never."

"Well, I suppose mine is a peculiar case. I wish I could find some remedy for it. It's no use for me to cover the horror up with a necktie and put on a pair of white cuffs; the world may be deceived, but I know that it's there."

"Then why don't you stick to plain white shirts?"

plank or blue, with bars or figures or stripes on it. Although I know that it will hurt me, lower my moral tone and render me unfit for decent society, I will even take a shirt with red and black horsehoes on it or mix with my fellow-man spotted with yellow polka dots rather than don the pure, innocent white of happier days.

"I remember so well my first shirts—I mean the first that were built after the pattern of the adult garment. I only wore them on Sundays, of course, but it used to be well into the middle of the week before I recovered from my misery. It was bad enough to be 'got ready,' to have myself ignominiously bathed by my mother, who was the most reckless woman with soap I ever saw, and who consistently put most of it into my eyes; and there was the further ordeal of having my hair and the upper part of my face brushed with a stiff, bristly brush; but these tortures were insignificant when compared with the agonies that the shirt caused me to suffer. The shirt of Nessus was a fool to it. My shirt was made by a woman who had raised seven boys of her own and was considered an authority. She was an economical woman, and didn't believe in wasting any unnecessary muslin, so that there was never enough tail to it to make it balance properly, and it fit around the neck like a Turkish bowstring in the moment of the sultan's wrath. It was done up at home, of course, and mother was as prodigal of starch as she was of soap, so that it stuck together like a porous plaster to its cover, from stem to stern, and the neckband was a quarter of an inch thick. The hired girl generally tore it apart and helped me on with it. She had long finger nails, and in buttoning the collar she invariably got hold of a fold of my skin and tried to push it through the buttonhole.

"Then they sent me out to Sunday school, choking and sore, and expected me to get benefited by it. I can remember how I had to sit there without being able to move my head independently of the rest of me for fear of cutting into the jugular vein and messing the cocoon matting, and how I hated to give up my penny for the heathen. It wasn't that I grudged the money, for I was always a free-hearted boy, but I thought of what I might be helping to bring the heathen to. I pictured him, care-free and happy, in an unstarched breech cloth and with no lesson leaflet to study in the afternoon, and I longed to be in his bright condition, much as I loved my dear teacher.

"I know that my perhaps morbid sensitiveness in regard to shirts was occasioned in the first place by the shirt of my youth. I own that my condition is morbid. I have got so that I size up a man, to a great extent, by the shirt that he wears, even with the knowledge that I myself am occasionally open to criticism of the hardest kind."

"I can stand for anything but a man sticking a superfluous diamond stud in the bosom of his negligee," said the silent partner.

"I don't believe there are such people," said the other man. "I like to think well of my kind."

"Naturally, but there are mighty few of your kind around. But I guess you've made a mistake about my shirt. There's no purple about it, and no stripes. I should call it a black and white check."

"The monomaniac walked over to the mirror above the wash stand and surveyed himself. 'I can't understand that,' he said, turning, with a puzzled expression on his face. 'I could have sworn that it was the purple shirt that I took out of the drawer—and it had the identical effect. I don't see what could have made me speak harshly to that poor girl.'

"I guess you'll have to put it down to natural cussedness and let it go at that," declared the silent partner. "Your shirt won't wash."—Chicago Daily Record.
